

Low-power FM broadcasting would enhance community life in the Merrimack Valley. It would allow more diverse and specific public affairs programming, and allow community groups to promote their activities. This is especially important given movement away from cities to urban and exurban areas.